

The Butterfly Effect Project

The Butterfly Effect Project

Unifying stories across generations, land, & time

The Butterfly Effect Project (BEP) celebrates the unity of immigration and migration stories. In a time where communities are pulled towards division, BEP aims to unearth the roots that connect us all.

Creating an interdisciplinary experience will weave together a series of unique personal histories and stories to create a tapestry showcasing the shared way humans move and adapt all over the world, recognizing and respecting that our work exists on indigenous land.

Immigration and migration stories are known and shared by people across every border and every generation. Ambition, perseverance, and love are all common foundations from which families build a safer, more prosperous home for their children and following generations. This country stands on a dual-edged sword: barring rights to the pursuit of happiness, and systems of capitalist meritocracy. It is evident this prioritizes a select few to experience this kind of joy. The current administration silences and villainizes our collective ambition to cultivate a welcoming world which looks after each of its community members with tenderness and strength. The BEP intends to rise in defiance and hope, unifying the voices of people of all backgrounds by showcasing stories of change and connection through the lens of immigration.

The BEP seeks to illuminate universal threads of intention, evolution, and survival, revealing the connection of stories shared by cultures and communities all over the world. Beneath cultural and racial differences, the same longing for love, growth, and opportunity drives humanity to new places.

Artists of all backgrounds and mediums are invited to share personal or communal stories of immigration and movement, including journeys of those who have needed to move due to environmental factors or loss of land. An interactive map that traces people's physical journeys will showcase unity amongst marginalized communities. The BEP will consist of traveling visual art exhibits, performances, poetry slams, workshops, and immersive galleries. Unifying themes of change, connection, and community will layer individual narratives into a portrait of global migration.

The BEP's mission is vital to the community for the purpose of showcasing stories of connection and change across race, generations, land, and time. The BEP encourages artists and non-artists to share their stories through a variety of mediums in order to reconnect with their roots, learn from one another, and write the next chapter of the community's collective story.

butterfly-effect-project.org | @the_butterflyeffect_project

The Butterfly Effect Project is volunteer-run and associated with AnySquared, a nonprofit.